

own regional economic cycles for grassroots people. In doing so, they want to eliminate the possibility of decentralised self-sufficiency for the regions.

Once that's achieved, it's time for them to establish the ultimate goal of a cashless society under their centralised control. Then, in the event of your slavish subservience and persistent inactivity, almost all bank branches will be closed down and the existing central banking systems will be redesignated as a state ministry. A now hidden, almost worldwide network of central banks will be made public, and attempts will be made to make any autonomy of national states or regions impossible. Hence the worldwide extension of the so-called 'generally dangerous pandemic'. The aim is to establish a globally uniform system, and for this to happen, they must also carry out the entire restructuring process worldwide. It's precisely the end times described in the Bible and elsewhere that are now here.

So it's the intention of the dark side to openly consolidate the power of the satanic structures in an even better centralised dictatorship of capital and Satan.

Of course, We are also interested in a unification of the systems of law, economy, exchange, sustainable and high quality production of goods with natural materials and regional production. Many things would be greatly simplified. This would strengthen all regions in all countries, make the massive transport of most products unnecessary, be good for the environment in all countries, massively change the relationship between the production of goods and services in favour of the production of goods, thereby further reducing working hours and much more. Slavery would be abolished and we would gradually arrive at a humanity voluntarily willing to perform, in which money no longer plays any role at all and the moneyless community could be established in the manner of the vision of the 'Star Trek films' of the 'Next Generation', only much better. Humanity would experience a world of universal abundance with almost no suffering and fear. It would be able to interact openly with other species from distant worlds that resonate on the positive side of polarity.

In order to get there, a transitional period is needed. This will last until the natural resources and the land are once again common property also in the perception of the general public, until most individuals are willing to perform voluntarily and then no longer need a 'reward' for an ego-motivated reason such as existential fear, a desire for recognition, arrogance, greed for power, etc.

The money must be issued free of interest and debt in accordance with the requirements of a constitutional order and by a genuine sovereign state. Money is only created in the subsidiary prioritised self-organised municipalities if a material asset is created for it, which is in the general ownership of the municipality and is able to generate added value. This added value must be made transparent and visible as public revenue and must again only be used for the creation of the common good.

In this way, inflation, deflation, indebtedness or a debt relationship never arises, and thus there is no dependence and no scarcity. This means that the money returns to being a real currency, which includes the right to a specific service in return in perpetuity and value.

Therefore, the issuer of the money must be a public-law corporation legitimised by the citizens, which by law grants the right to consumption associated with the money. A banknote is then a document that certifies this right and no longer just a colourfully printed piece of paper for which you can only get something as long as other people believe in the system.

This is also a subject on which you can very well separate the wheat from the chaff in current politics. Because if you don't make the monetary system an issue in politics, you're an ignorant person or you don't want to change anything fundamental. So you can see that the Pirates, the AfD [political parties in Germany] etc. are only alibi parties, controlled reservoirs for dissatisfied people, created to let the protest and the power of the rebels fizzle out.

The monetary system and its institutions and structures should be selfless servants of all people. So there must be no more extorted taxes, no fees, no interest.

The economic system should be geared to the generation of general well-being, to the needs of all people and to the conservation of the environment.

All tax payments should be voluntary, except for amounts for health and retirement and reparation costs to be paid for environmental damage caused. Thus, there is economic freedom and no obligation to make declarations. This puts an end to the redistribution of the citizens' work performance to the banking clans, which results in general abundance. Working hours can be reduced and there's enough money to preserve the environment, improve infrastructure, provide better educational facilities, etc.

Everyone should have the right to well-paid activity. In this way, all people would be free from constraints and poverty. Crime would very quickly become largely non-existent, as there would no longer be any economic and drug-related crime due to general abundance and the right to a well-paid job. This creates social peace and is thus also a basis for the possibility of international peace.

Health care should be geared to the production and maintenance of the nation's health. Illness of the population must be at the expense of the state. Thus the state has a vested interest in a high level of public health. And there's also a reinforcement of disease prevention. In addition, the state then also provides for inexpensive and effective medicines without harmful side effects, for an environment that's conducive to life and health, and for healthy food. It will provide comprehensive education and eliminate everything that is harmful or impose taxes on it.

It will be decreed by law that the industry can no longer leave the repair of the damage it's caused to the general public but must itself make amends. As a result, such damage will soon cease to exist.

The pension system should be based on real assets capable of generating added value and owned by the general public. The pension contributions can be used, for example, to build houses which are then rented out. The substantial rental income can be paid out to pensioners in old age. Pensioners can also be offered free or very inexpensive housing. After all, the material assets have been created with their contributions!

Since the houses last longer than a generation, the pension contributions can fall constantly. Poverty in old age is thus abolished or can only happen in the event of war, when all the material assets created are destroyed again.
